Rebuilding Day sees hundreds make home repairs for those in need

LIBERTY — Coming together to help dozens of homeowners across the Northland, hundreds of volunteers took to helping their neighbors complete home repairs as part of Rebuilding Together Kansas City's Rebuilding Day Saturday, Sept. 14.

During the day, the nonprofit organization dispatched groups of volunteers to residences of 20 families. Rebuilding Day is focused on eliminating unsafe and deplorable living conditions for homeowners who do not have the financial or physical means to complete the repairs themselves.

With a group of more than 20 volunteers from Liberty Christian Church at a residence on Thornton Street in Liberty, Cyndy Doyle of Liberty said the day gave her a chance to pay it forward after volunteers have been to her residence multiple times.

"To be able to give back is one of the greatest human things we can do," she said. "It's all about love and helping our fellow man."

Doyle said volunteers have completed involved projects at her home that consisted of pouring a new driveway, painting her house and remodeling the basement to remove toxic mold that was unsafe for her and her grandchild.

"It's just absolutely wonderful. ... It's about more than that though, I found a home church through it as well," she said of Liberty Christian. "I found my home and found a family."

While painting shutters at the Thornton residence Saturday, volunteer and Liberty Christian Church member Allen Bright said he was happy to be able to get involved this year.

"Our church has been doing this for years," he said. "I like to come out and help when I can. I'm glad they moved it because usually they do this in October when I'm always busy. Doing this in September means I can help."

George Waddell, who along with his wife owns the Thornton Street residence, said he wanted all of the volunteers to know how appreciative he is of the work. At his home, more than 20 volunteers teamed up Saturday morning to complete work that included replacing siding, painting the residence along with window trim and garage doors, upgrading deck steps and renovating the existing deck.

Waddell said volunteers were not only generous with the amount of manpower they were dedicating to physical work at his home, but were thorough in planning and communicating with his family about what they needed to make sure their home was comfortable and safe.

"This isn't the Taj Mahal and I told them that. ... I've always lived by what the good book says, that is that you should be content with what you get but they went above that," he said, adding he is trying to think of a way to give back to the organization who gave his family so much.

Waddell said his health and income are such that he could not make the needed repairs on his own.

"As a man of faith, I also believe that these people are doing what our savior, Jesus, said, which is love your neighbor," he said. "I'll be 65 in November and I've never had help with anything in my life. ... I always thought help was for certain kinds of folks. Turns out, I just didn't know the right folks."

Montessori school.

"This is truly a love," Kobylski said. "The reason I started my school, we truly focus on education and helping children learn to love to learn. To love knowledge, I did not do this to make money."

All the funds taken in by the Montessori go to running the school and payroll, she said.

Looking forward and placing her school aside, she believes Missouri EATS will be what is most "near and dear" to her heart. It is going to be fun and rewarding, she said. MoEATS aims to provide a closer look at the local food system and help the community develop an action plan to strengthen that system and society as a whole.

"I am the type of person who can't just sit and complain about it, I have to make a difference. Complaining does nothing," Kobylski said. "I don't like seeing hungry children. I think that is why Missouri EATS is going to be big to me."

Being a regular volunteer, Kobylski said she is blessed to have a husband who supports her efforts and her time away.

The biggest struggle of volunteerism for some, Kobylski said, is being spread thin. Differing from that notion, Kobylski was almost built for it as she doesn't get stressed out when there is a lot to do, she said.

"When something happens, I just move onto the next," she said. "I just keep rolling."

The biggest difficulty she sees, is funding for her beloved endeavors. Many people are willing to put in time, but funding is harder to find, she said.

"I just wish there was an endless supply," she said.
